Military Edition Bandage

Use of The Emergency Bandage® in a combat scenario is both intuitive and simple. By tearing open any notch in the packaging a medic can access the product within seconds. The bandage is now ready for positioning on the casualty. Following the reverse wrap through the pressure applicator, medics have the ability to facilitate several coverage choices with the same bandage saving time and blood loss. Coverage for extremity bleeds, amputations, head injuries, groin injuries, eviscerations, and more can be accomplished with one single product as the device provides coverage, compression, stabilization, and immobilization. Compact vacuum packaging allows medics to carry the device comfortably in any kit or pocket. Due to its simple design, training for The Emergency Bandage® can be accomplished quickly, and the required gross motor skills make treating patients less difficult during care under fire.

Multiple Needs – One Bandage of Choice

Those who care for the wounded know the need for reliable, durable medical equipment that saves times and lives. No matter where the need, The Emergency Bandage® delivers.

The Emergency Bandage® was invented by a former Israeli Defense Forces medic and first emerged in military medicine in 1999. Fifty nicknamed The Israeli Bandage® by US service members, the device quickly became a staple in military medicine. Service members across the globe are trained on "The Israeli", and once back on US soil share their accounts and expertise with those in the civilian sector. Now The Emergency Bandage® can be found in use by federal law enforcement agencies, SWAT, local law enforcement agencies, and EMS.
